Cartus Launches 7th Biennial Global Mobility Policies and Practices Survey

DANBURY, Conn., (June 15, 2016) – Cartus Corporation, a leading provider of global relocation services, announced the launch of its 7th biennial Global Mobility Policies and Practices Survey. The survey, which has been conducted every two years since 2002, has become one of the relocation industry's most anticipated sources of current relocation trends, challenges, and policy approaches of businesses around the world. Respondents include companies of all sizes, from a wide variety of industries and in all global regions, typically representing a total universe of more than 6 million employees. Cartus, which provides services to more than half of the Fortune 50, has assisted transferring employees in 185 countries.

The survey covers all types of international assignments, extending beyond traditional long- and short-term assignments to many of the new, more temporary types. Additionally, respondents will be sharing their insights and perspectives on such topics as:

- Cost control for global mobility programs
- Talent management
- Language and cross-cultural training
- Repatriation and employee retention
- Duty of Care

Cartus research is a key factor in helping companies keep their policies and programs competitive, current, and cost effective, and in understanding factors which drive better ROI and assignment outcomes.

Relocation managers who are responsible for cross-border company relocation in any part of the globe are encouraged to participate in this survey through the link below:
